Planting trees

With more than 30,000 trees planted since we announced the program in 2006, neighbors come together to beautify their community through tree plantings.

Creating a beautiful, healthy and safe environment for Indy residents

KIB's NeighborWoods program not only improves the natural environment through aesthetics and clean air and water; trees also improve our health and well-being—exposure to even small amounts of trees reduces mental fatigue, and reduced air pollution from the presence of trees helps to ameliorate respiratory problems. Research also shows that trees help to reduce crime and foster safer, more sociable neighborhoods. In an inner-city neighborhood, the greener the residence, the lower the crime rate. Residents reported fewer violent crimes and property crimes in green neighborhoods as compared to those that were barren.

Building community through greening

By planting trees at home, work, or in your neighborhood, you are investing in your community and forging a green legacy for future generations to enjoy. Neighbors are introduced and communities are strengthened through tree planting all over our city every weekend. With your help we can grow our city's tree canopy and make Indy a better place to live, work, and play!
